The Tales of YOGI BEAR

THE HUNTING HORN

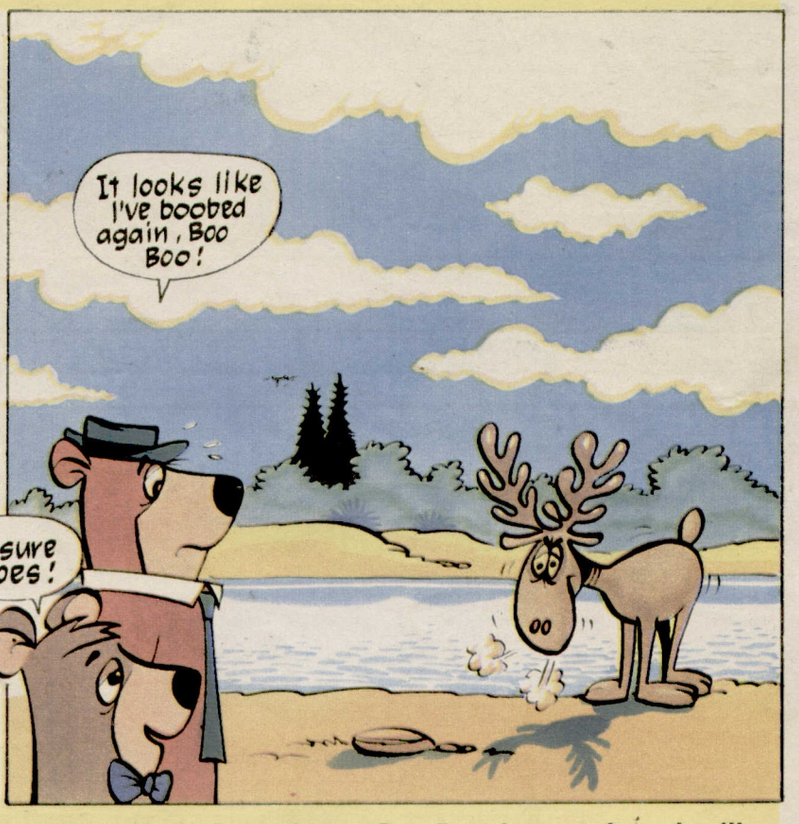

1. Instead of hanging round the picnic ground, hoping for a free feed from the visitors to Jellystone Park, Yogi Bear and Boo Boo decided to try catching a duck for their dinner. On their way to the lake, they found an odd looking object. It looked like an old car horn with the rubber bulb missing.

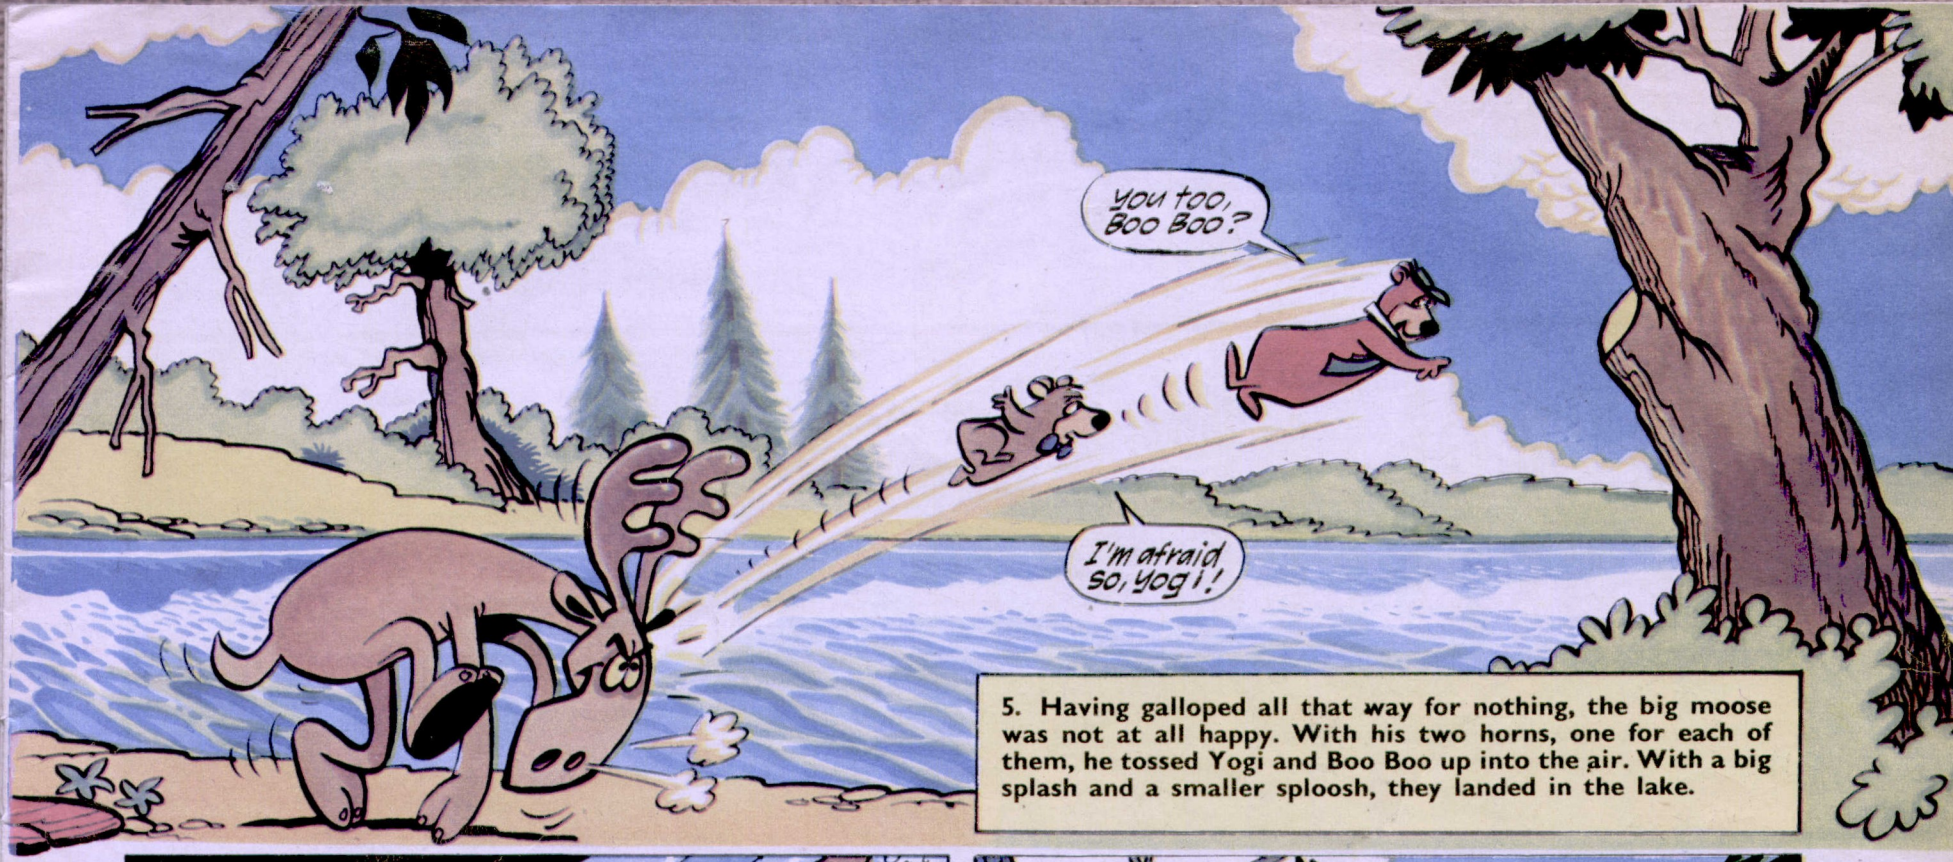

2. Some duck hunters use callers to call ducks. When blown they make a noise like QUACK QUACK. When Yogi blew this one it went MOO. No duck would be fooled by a noise like that. "But a silly goose might," said Yogi. There were geese on the lake, too. If they couldn't get a duck, a goose would do.

3. There were many ducks and geese swimming about the lake. "A duck hunter's dream come true!" exclaimed Yogi. He put the old horn to his lips and blew. What happened next? Well, the ducks and geese just upped and flew. "There goes our dinner, thanks to you!" sighed Boo Boo.

4. Poor Yogi! According to Boo Boo, he was the only silly goose by the lake, which was now empty. "After all that blowing I should have attracted something," Yogi sighed. He had. The big moose that was always on the loose thought it was another moose in trouble and had come galloping over.

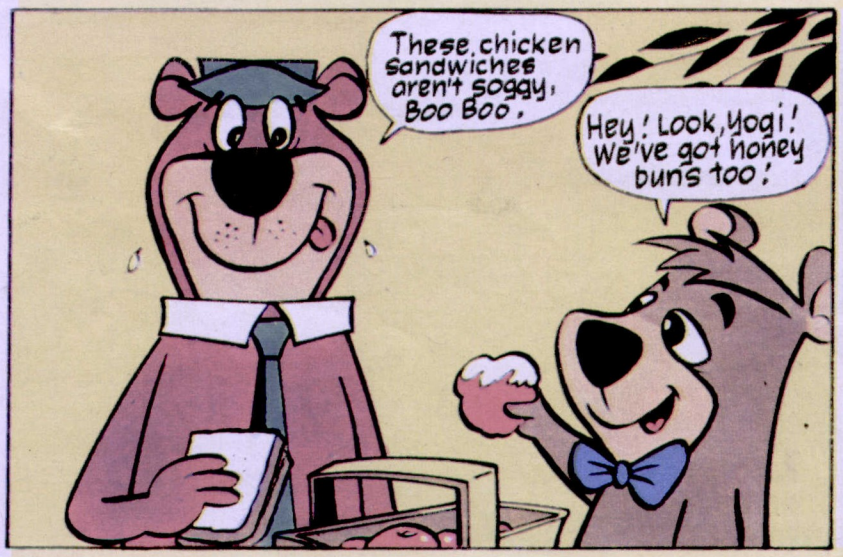

5. Having galloped all that way for nothing, the big moose was not at all happy. With his two horns, one for each of them, he tossed Yogi and Boo Boo up into the air. With a big splash and a smaller sploosh, they landed in the lake.

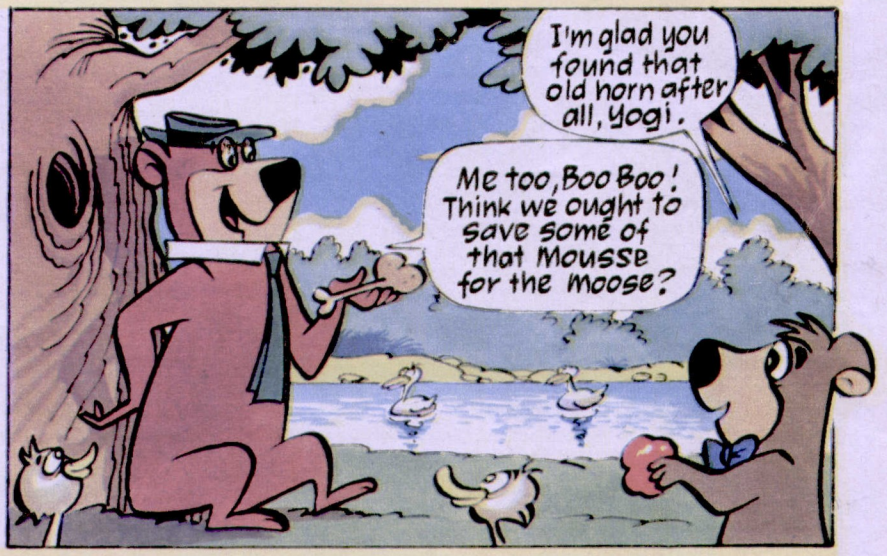

6. Yogi and Boo Boo hit the water so fast, they both went right down to the bottom of the lake. When Yogi first looked round, he thought he had landed on the picnic ground. Right before his eyes, at the bottom of the lake, was a big picnic basket. It had fallen off a boat.

7. It seemed a shame to leave such a lovely basket there. So Yogi and Boo Boo took the picnic basket back to shore with them. "Perhaps it's full of food," Yogi said as they came out of the water. "It won't be much good if it is," grumbled Boo Boo. "It'll be wet and soggy, like us!"

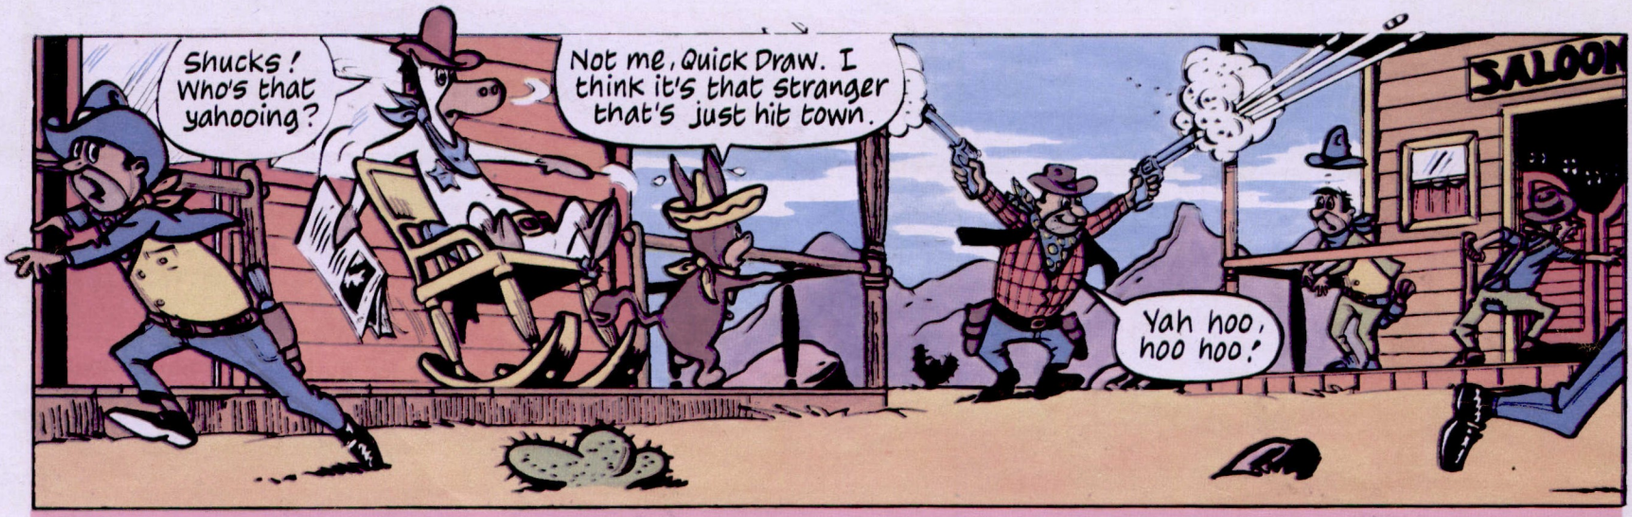

8. Whoever had packed that picnic basket knew how to pack a hamper. All the food was in foil and plastic bags and no water had spoiled any of it. All the sandwiches, cakes and pies were just as fresh as when they had been made. The hamper could only have been in the water a few hours.

9. That old horn had proved to be useful after all. Never had Yogi and Boo Boo had such a picnic before. They shared their food with the ducks and geese on the lake. They would have even given some to that mean old moose, but he had mooched back to his home on the other side of the park.

EXCITING TIMES WITH QUICK DRAW McGRAW

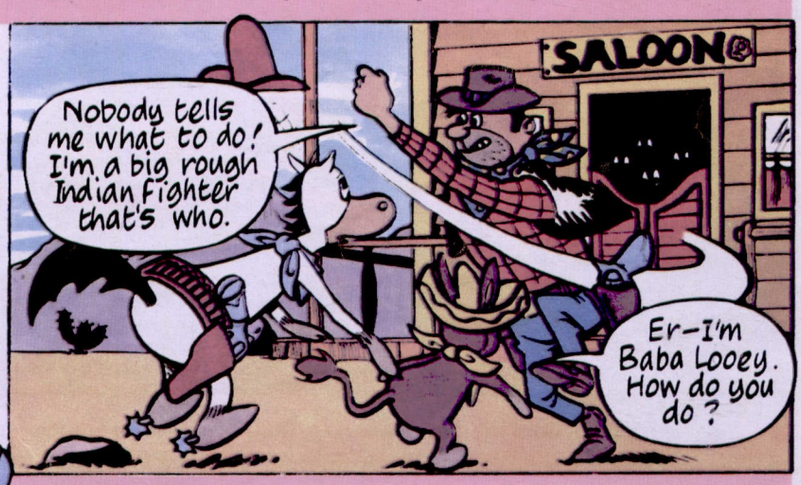

INDIAN FIGHTER

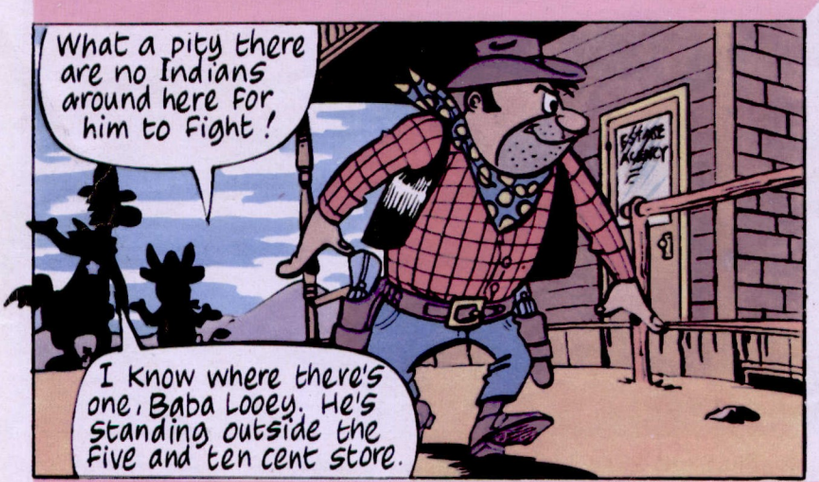

1. It was just the day for doing nothing. Even the crickets had stopped cricketing. Everything was peaceful and quiet. So quiet that you could have heard a pin drop. But it was something much louder than a pin dropping that roused Quick Draw McGraw from his noon day snooze. Somebody was making a dreadful din. It was a stranger who had come into town. He was yelling and shouting and shooting his guns in the air. The peace and quiet had gone.

2. As sheriff, it was Quick Draw's job to keep everything peaceful. So he strolled over to the stranger and politely asked him to keep quiet. If he didn't, then Quick Draw would have to lock him up for making a riot.

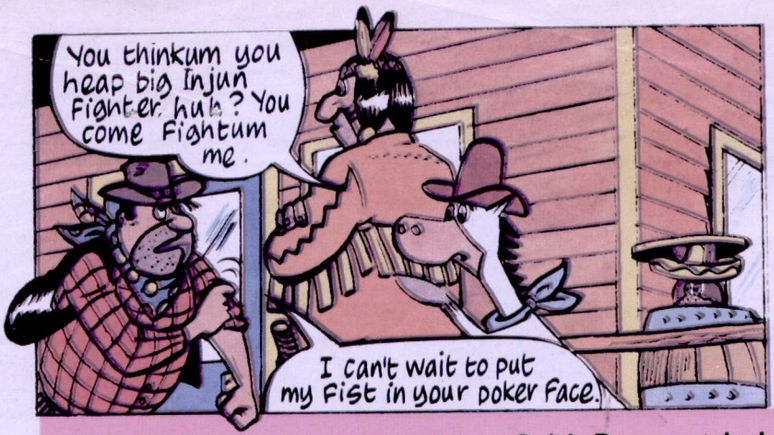

3. Now the stranger, who was a baddie, didn't take kindly to being told what to do. He was a big, tough man and he told Quick Draw and Baba Looey that he wanted to make a noise. If they tried to stop him, he'd knock them down, he said.

4. Quick Draw wondered what to do. He didn't want to use his gun because shooting would make even more noise, so he thought of something else instead. He got the idea from what the stranger said about being an Indian fighter.

5. There was a big Indian made of wood that stood outside the general store. He had scratches where passers-by struck matches on his nose. He was heavy, too. When Quick Draw tried to lift him, he found he needed help from Baba Looey.

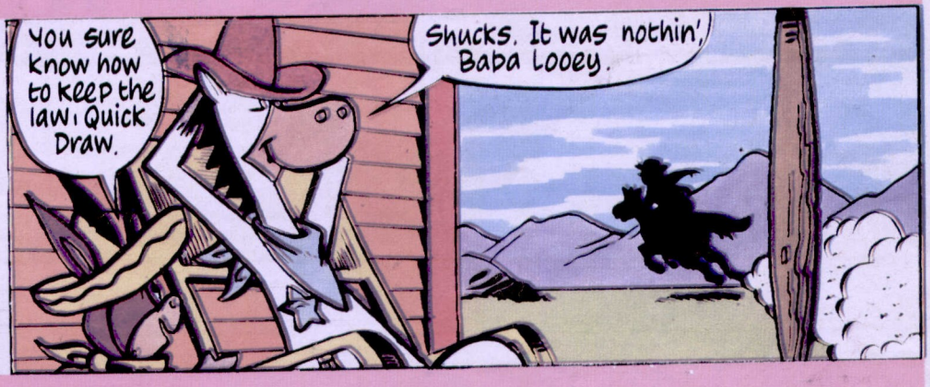

6. Hiding behind the wooden Indian, Quick Draw watched the big baddie stroll up the street. As he came closer, Quick Draw started to speak. "Heap big loud mouth," Quick Draw called him and lots of other nasty names.

7. The big baddie was furious and he tried to knock the smile right off the wooden Indian's face. He punched the wooden Indian under the chin with his right fist then tried to knock his head off with the other one.

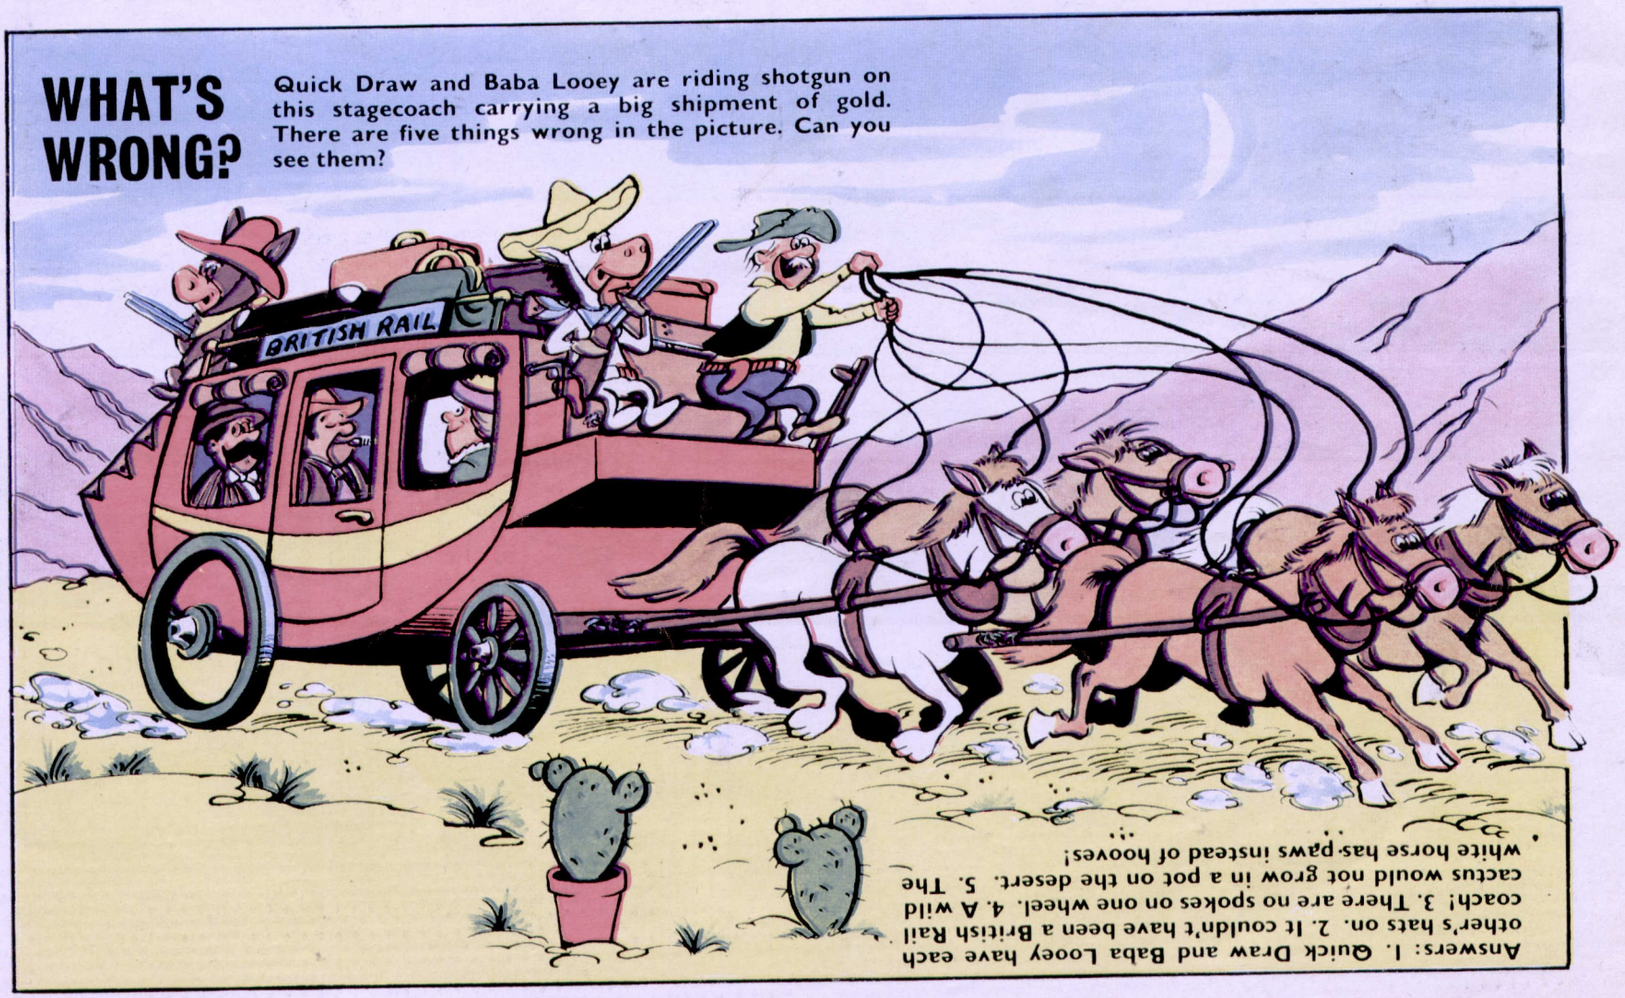

8. At that, the big baddie was struck dumb. He hissed and gasped and hopped about. His knuckles hurt. "Serves you right," said Quick Draw. "Now, I don't want to hear another peep out of you!"

9. The baddie didn't make another sound. He was on his horse and away as soon as he could. Thanks to Quick Draw the town was quiet again. Most people never knew there had been trouble, they had snoozed right through it, which shows how quietly Quick Draw goes about his business.

WHAT'S WRONG?

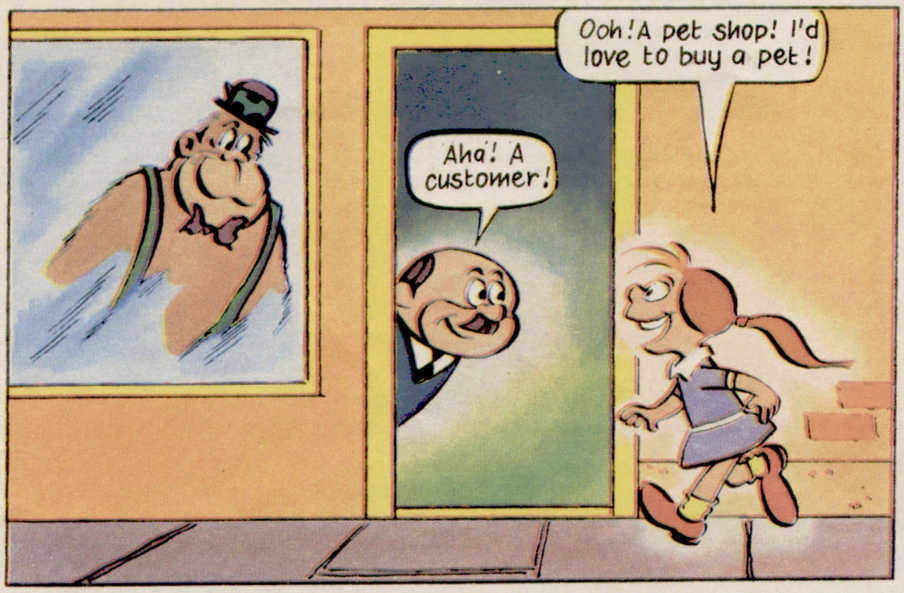

Quick Draw and Baba Looey are riding shotgun on this stagecoach carrying a big shipment of gold. There are five things wrong in the picture. Can you see them?

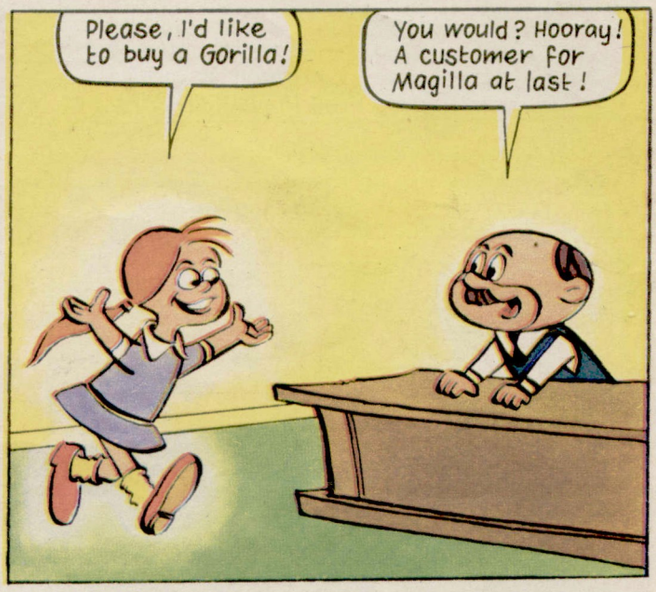

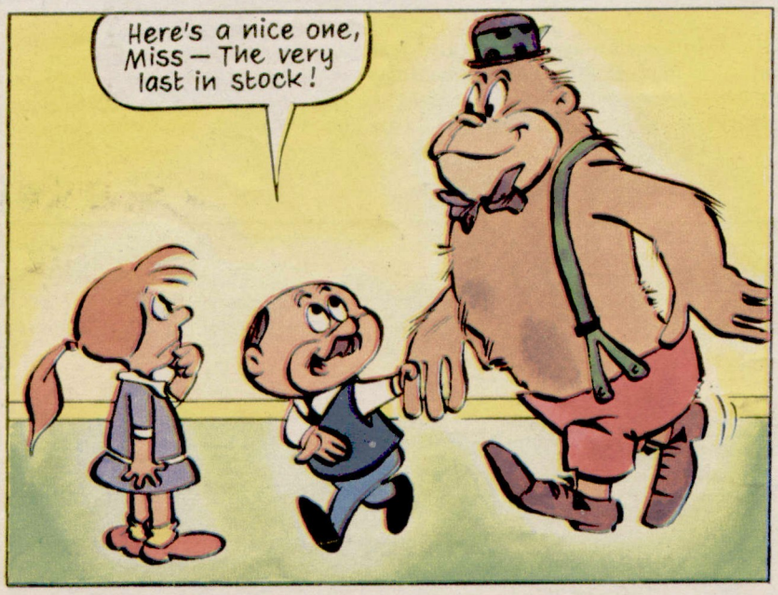

Answers: 1. Quick Draw and Baba Looey have each other's hats on. 2. It couldn't have been a British Rail coach! 3. There are no spokes on one wheel. 4. A wild cactus would not grow in a pot on the desert. 5. The white horse has paws instead of hooves!

There are many things on this page that are not at all as they seem. It is what is known as Optical Illusion, a scientific way of saying that you can't always believe your eyes. After looking at these illusions you will agree that seeing should not always be believing.

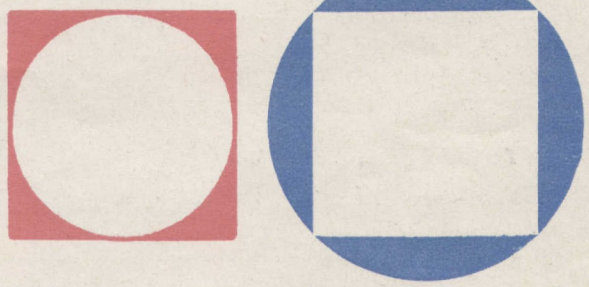

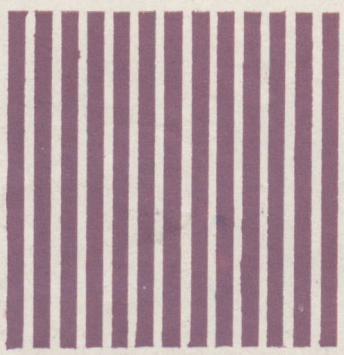

If you look carefully at the two thick vertical lines they appear to be bending outwards from the centre. However, if you get a ruler and check, you will find they are both perfectly straight. This optical illusion is caused by the eyes focusing on the thin lines coming from the centre of the circle.

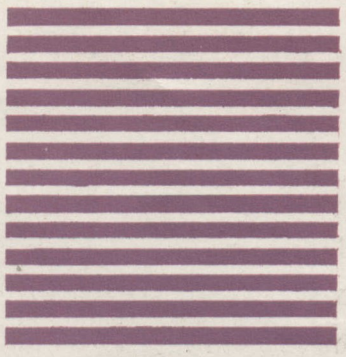

Which line is the longer, A or B? The bottom line B looks longer but it isn't. Both lines are exactly the same length.

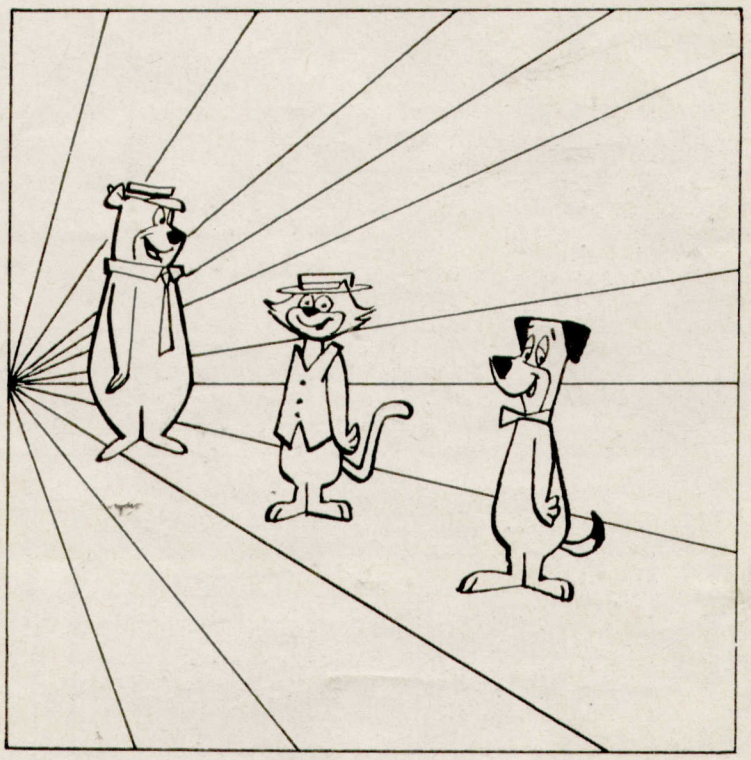

Which is longer and wider, the circle inside the square, or the square inside the circle? The answer is neither. Both are as deep and as wide as each other.

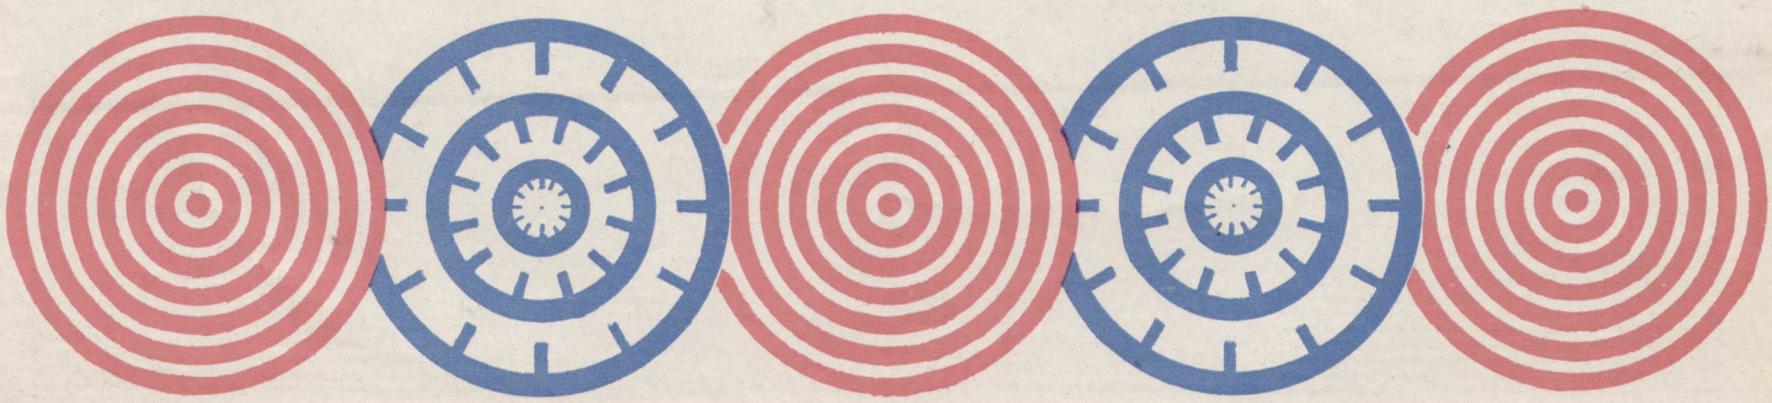

WHICH IS THE HIGHER—WHICH IS THE WIDER? One of these squares looks higher than it is wide, the other looks wider than it is high. In fact, both are exactly square.

Who is the tallest, Yogi, Boss Cat or Huck? We must admit that Yogi looks tallest. But in this picture, the big one is Huck.

WHIRLING WHEELS? Look at these wheels and turn the page round and round to the left. The plain wheels will appear to revolve to the left and the other wheels will appear to turn more slowly in the opposite direction.

POTATO ANIMALS ARE FUN

Here's how to make them!

Here's a simple way to make your own funny animals. You will need some potatoes and carrots, some used matchsticks, some lolly sticks and a black felt-tipped pen. The pictures show clearly how to put your animals together. For the giraffe neck we used a lolly stick, but for the necks of the other animals, matchsticks will be big enough. The funny-shaped potatoes and carrots will suggest the sort of animals you can make. Be sure to ask Mummy before you take any vegetables from the kitchen, won't you!

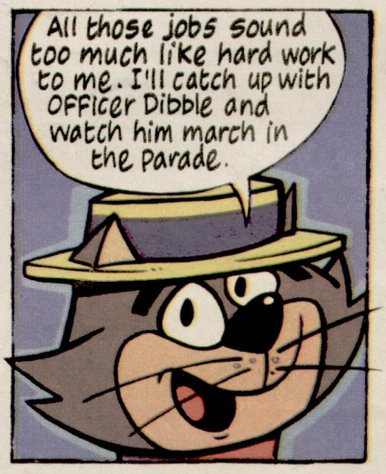

BOSS CAT

THE DAY IT RAINED

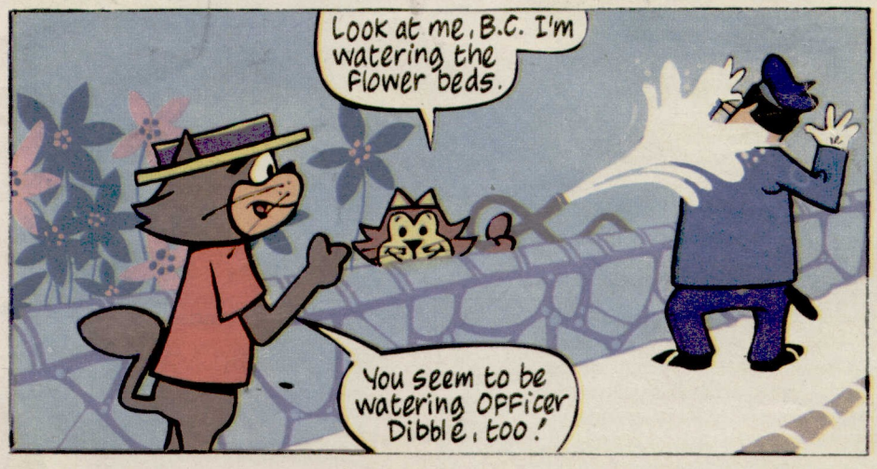

FIND THE PAIRS In this picture you can see an owl and a cat. Do you know what they have in common? They can both see in the dark. Now study all the other animals shown and see if you can name the things they have in common.

Answers: Racehorse and greyhound—both race. Cow and goat—both give milk. Monkey and squirrel—both eat nuts. Fish and duck—they both swim.

The HAPPY DAYS OF HUCKLEBERRY HOUND

THE CAVES

1. Huck and Ding-a-ling decided to go on a coach outing together to visit the caves—big caves that go a long way under the ground. When they arrived, Huck fancied a cup of tea before going inside. Ding-a-ling wanted to wait until later. He was afraid they'd miss the guide.

2. They went inside the cave when the guide called out, "Follow me". There were lots of lights so that everyone could see. But it was rather chilly inside the cave and as they got further and deeper into it, Huck again wished that he'd had time for his cup of tea.

3. The deeper they went into the cave, the more there was to see. There were rocks hanging like icicles, called stalactites, and others like pointed candles called stalagmites. Huck thought this was all very interesting, but he still wished he had not missed his cup of tea.

4. Next they saw something that made Huck forget all about his cup of tea. It was beautiful, just like fairyland. Huck was pleased now that he had come into the cave. "This is as far as we go," said the guide. "Follow me and I will take you back to the top another way in time for tea."

5. Huck and Ding-a-ling were so busy looking at the beauty of the cave that they hadn't heard what the guide had said. Thinking that everyone was with him, the guide left the cave and with him went the light. "Who put the light out?" said Huck. "Now I can't see a single thing!"

6. They were wondering what to do when in the distance they saw a glow. "That must be the light from the guide's lamp. Come on!" said Ding-a-ling. Huck wasn't so sure it was the right way to go when they followed the glow. Some of the passages they had to squeeze through seemed very narrow.

7. Huck saw more lights than the one ahead when he bumped his head. "It must be a glow-worm we're following," he said. "If this tunnel gets any narrower, I'm going to get stuck." Ding-a-ling was having doubts, too. He was sure that the fat people in the party could never have got through.

8. It was wet and clammy in the passage. "We can't stay here, that's for sure," said Huck. "You take the lead," said Ding-a-ling, "I will follow you." Huck squeezed and pushed on ahead. Then he saw two lights instead of one. Then a voice said: "Howdy. Where have you two come from?"

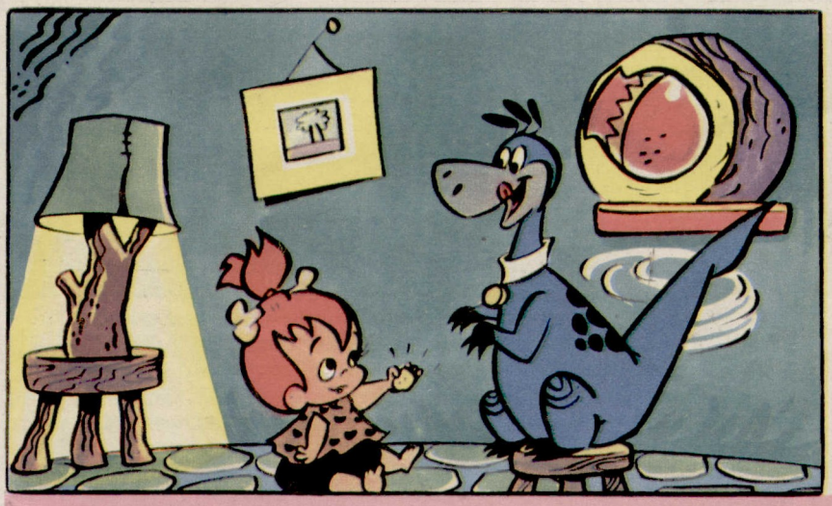

9. The potholers were friendly fellows. They offered to share their snacks with Huck and Ding-a-ling. "By the time you get back up top, the tea shop will be shut," they said to Huck. "So you might as well stay down here and have tea with us." Huck had never had tea underground before.

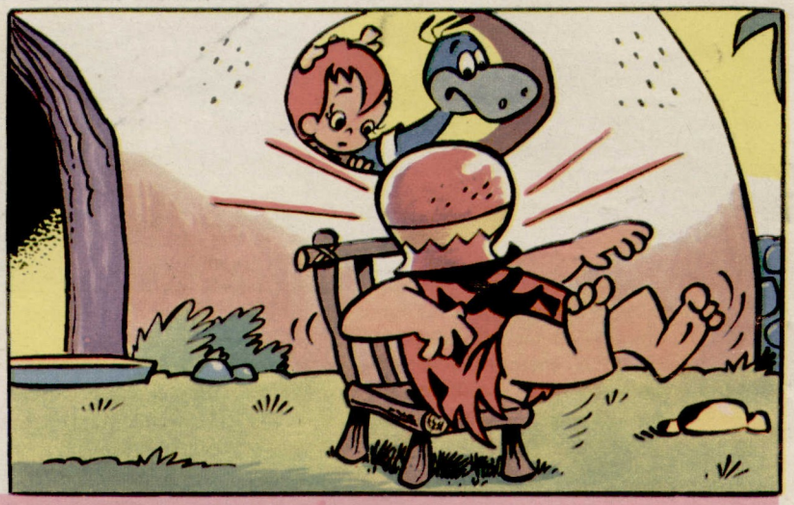

10. Thanks to meeting the potholers, Huck and Ding-a-ling were helped out of the hole they were in! When they got to the top, not only was the tea shop shut but the coach had gone as well. But they were in luck again. Percy and Pete, the potholers, took them home in their car. What fun!

FUN with The FLINTSTONES

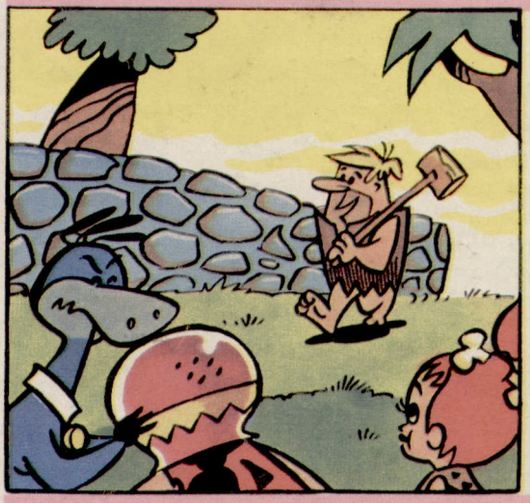

THE VASE

1. Never teach pet dinosaurs tricks indoors. Pebbles taught Dino a new trick and caused quite a bit of bother. Dino hadn't meant to knock the vase out of the window. He had wagged his tail because he had earned a sweet.

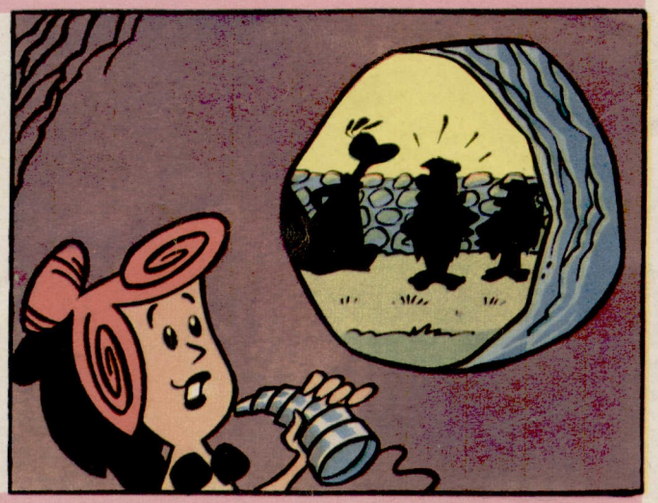

2. The first they knew that the vase had gone was when they heared a muffled shout from the garden. They looked out and saw the vase stuck over Fred's head. "How could that have happened?" Pebbles wanted to know.

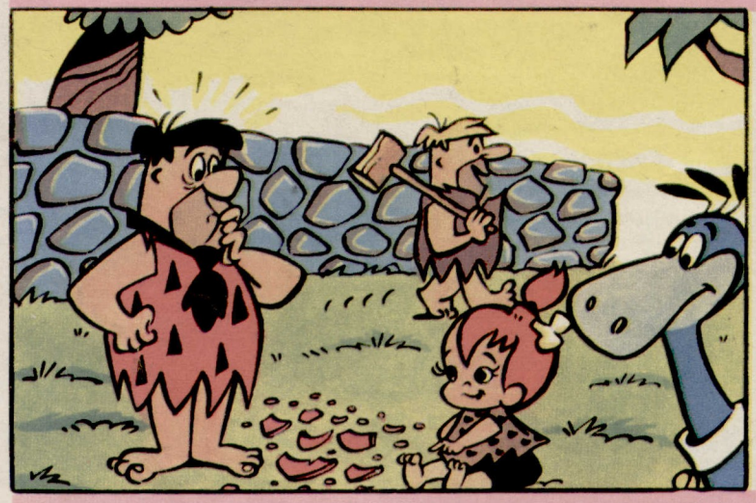

3. The vase was stuck fast. Everyone tried to get it off. Then Barney Rubble came along to return a hammer he had borrowed from Fred some months before.

4. "Poor Daddy's in trouble," said Pebbles. So Barney gave Fred a gentle tap on the head and the vase shattered.

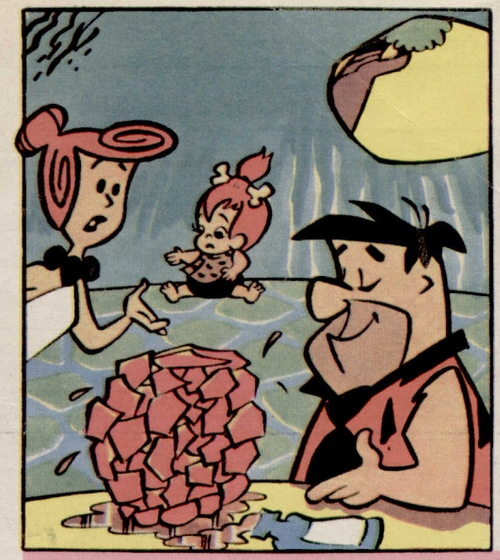

5. Then Fred had another blow. Wilma called from the window. "Your sister Freda phoned. She is coming to see us. We'd better put that vase she gave us in a place where she can see it."

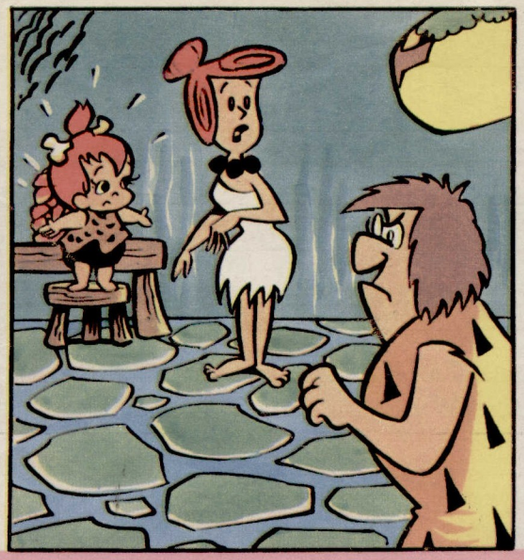

6. "Which vase was that?" asked Fred. Pebbles knew which vase it was. She pointed to the pieces on the ground. "That one, Daddy," she said. "Oh, no!" gasped Fred. "I'm in trouble!" Barney decided he'd better be off.

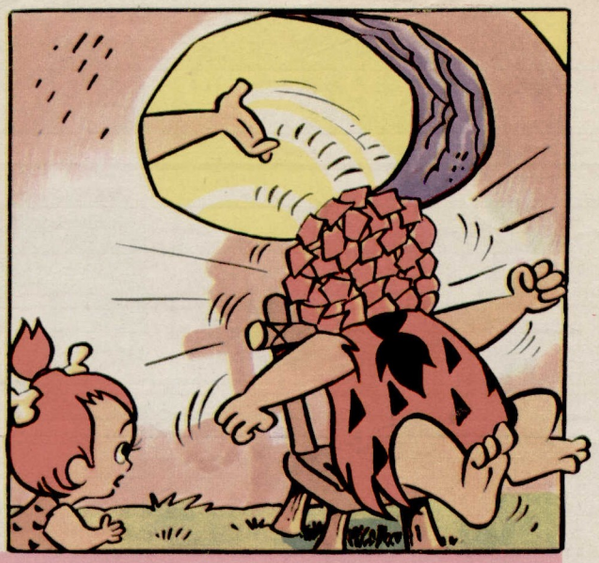

7. While Fred almost went to pieces too, Pebbles found some glue. Yes, clever little Pebbles knew what to do. "With a bit of luck we might mend the vase so well it will look as good as new," she said. "It better had," groaned Fred as he picked up the pieces.

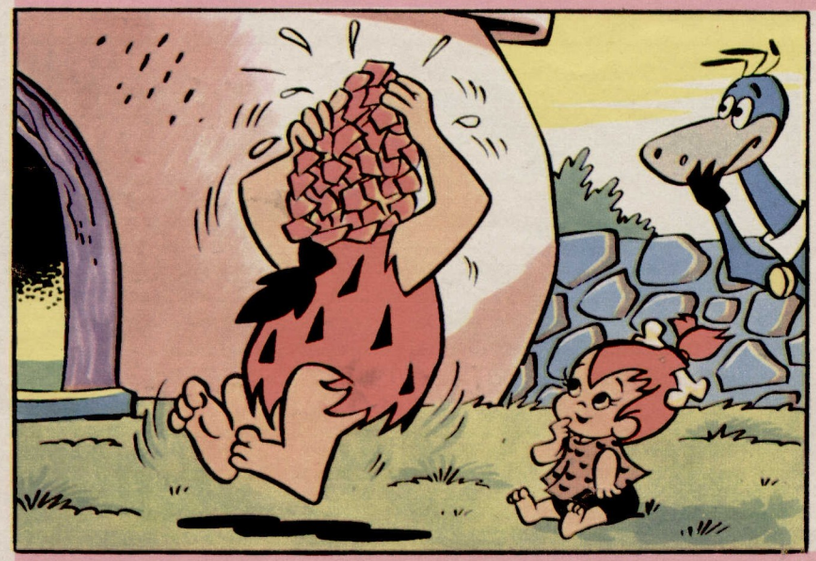

8. Piece by piece they managed to put the vase together. Pebbles hoped her aunt Freda would not be able to see the cracks.

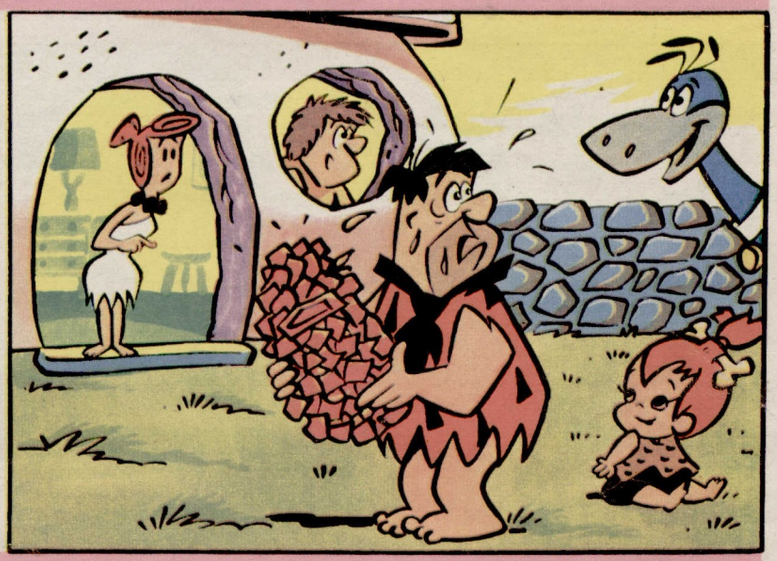

9. Fred went out into the garden when Aunt Freda arrived. She put on her glasses and although Pebbles stood in front of the vase, Aunt Freda still managed to see it.

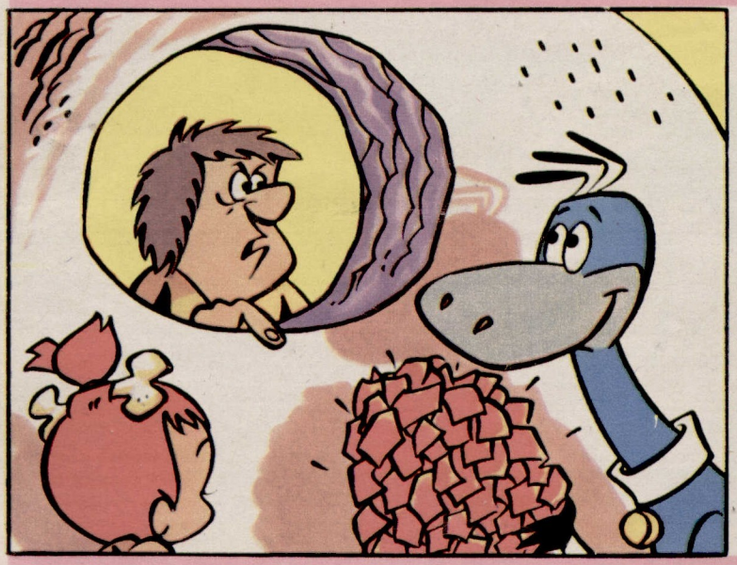

10. Aunt Freda glared at the vase. "What an awful-looking object," she said. Then she picked it up and threw it into the garden. Guess where it landed? Back on Fred's head!

11. Poor Wilma didn't know what to do when Aunt Freda told her to replace the vase she'd tossed out of the window with the one she'd given them for a present. Fred had a problem, too. As he tried to get the vase off his head, it stretched!

12. It was the glue between the cracks that was stretching and when Dino pulled, it stretched even more. Eventually Fred got the vase off just as Wilma told him the terrible news that Aunt Freda wanted to see her vase.

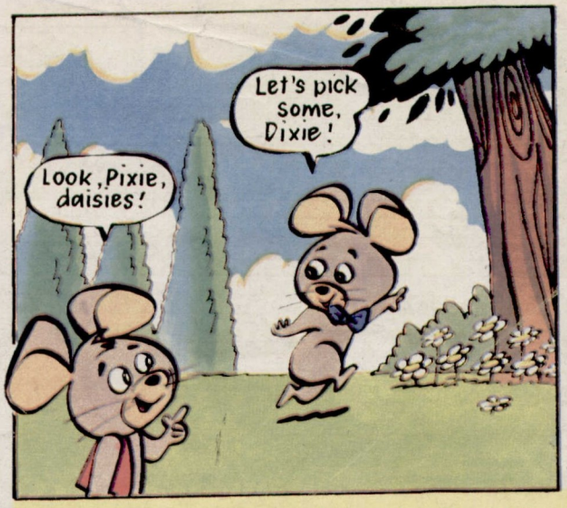

13. Aunt Freda saw her vase but, of course, she did not recognise it. But she wanted to know where the strange vase Dino was holding had come from. "You gave it to us," said Pebbles. "I must have been mad!" she replied.

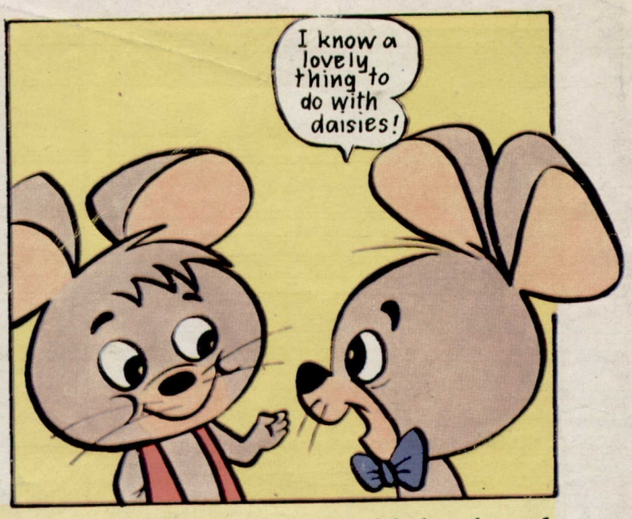

14. Then Aunt Freda demanded that Fred and Wilma return the vase to her. Such a beautiful thing wasn't safe in Fred's clumsy hands, she said. As soon as Aunt Freda got the vase she left. To be truthful, the Flintstones were glad to see both go!

Pixie and Dixie and Mr Jinks

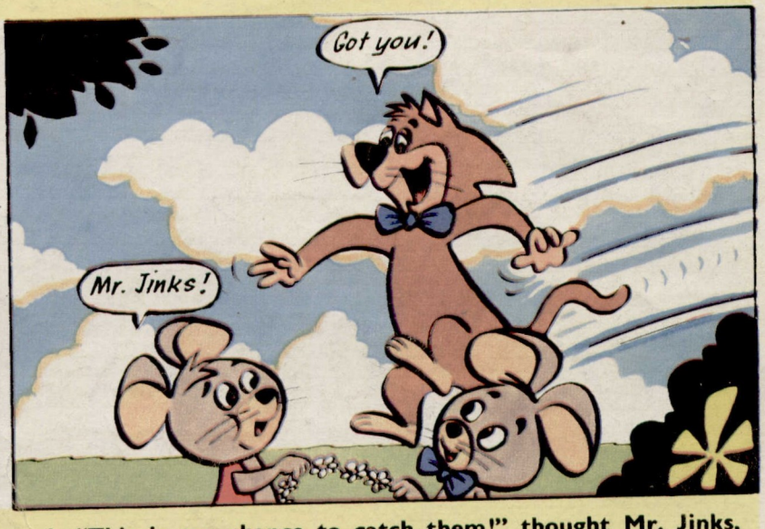

1. Every time the sun shines bright, Pixie and Dixie, the merry little mice, like to take a walk in the park. They are lucky to have such a nice big park near them. One day when they went there to play, they were especially lucky because the daisies that grow in the grass were in bloom.

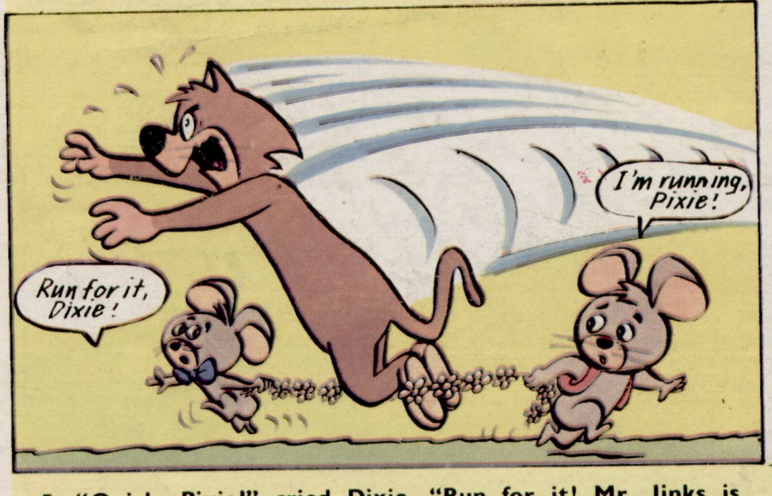

2. Pixie and Dixie love to pick bunches of pretty daisies, just like most children do. The little mice liked to take them home and put them in egg cups which they used as vases. The daisies looked very pretty in the home of the mice. But on this day, Pixie had a different idea.

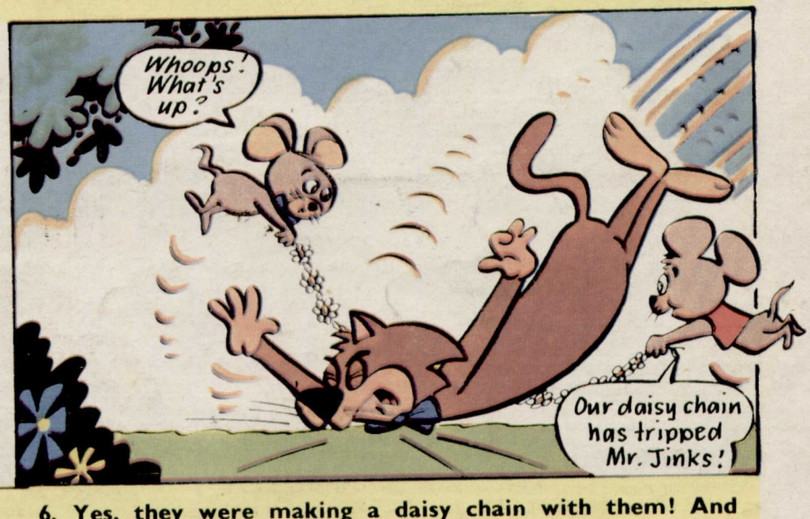

3. Whatever were those mice up to, sitting there on the grass? They looked very busy. Mr. Jinks wondered what they were up to as well when he came along. He is the big, bad cat who just loves to chase our mousey friends. Pixie and Dixie were so busy that they didn't see Mr. Jinks.

4. "This is my chance to catch them!" thought Mr. Jinks, and he tip-toed very quietly up to the little mice. Then—pounce! With a big "me-ow" to make them jump, Mr. Jinks went leaping towards Pixie and Dixie. The mice were so surprised that they fell backwards with shock.

5. "Quick, Pixie!" cried Dixie. "Run for it! Mr. Jinks is after us!" Pixie ran one way and Dixie ran the other way as fast as their little legs could move. By running in different directions, Mr. Jinks could chase only one of them. Now we can see what they were doing with the daisies.

6. Yes, they were making a daisy chain with them! And because neither Pixie or Dixie had let go of their end of the daisy chain, it tripped Mr. Jinks over! Poor old Mr. Jinks had failed again. He landed on his nose with such a thump that the little mice ran away laughing!
